Letter from Petersburg, [Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

Petersburg, January 20, 1875. The School Board, at a meeting held this afternoon, decided to postpone indefinitely the proposed dedication of the new Anderson Seminary building (the white High School). Major E. B. prespondence of the Richmond Dispatch.] Approvertox county, January 19, 1875. The good people of this section bave taken dvantage of the very favorable weather of last fall, and the winter so far, to push forward their work with unusual alacrity. Your correspondent does not recollect the time when he has seen so much land ploughed and so many plant-patches burned so early in the season, and he is not a very young man either. Everybody is preparing to spread themselves on tobacco. Last year, when it was a drug in the market, the comspecially of inferior tobacco, on hand to was hast three years. Now they say the deficiency caused by last year's failure cannot be supplied in three years. We shall see how much they know about it.

There was a slight "unpleasantness" between two parties at Pamplin's last Saturday, one of whom received a ball in his side, inflating a slight wound, while a negro looking on got a stray shot in the toe.

FATAL PLUNGE .- A young man named Joseph Phelps made a fatal plunge into the canal and out of the world on Monday evening. He had taken passage on an ice-boat to go up the canal while in a state of intoxication. Before reaching the first lock above the city he was seen to jump from the boat into the icy waters of the canal. The hands on board by prompt efforts succeeded in fishing him out, and got him back into the boat. a wetter if not a wiser man. They supposed that the effect of his freezing bath would bill any further aspirations be might have erianmortality by that means, but in that they were mistaken. When the boat had otten a snort distance above the lock he hade another plunge, and this time succeeded in his fatal purpose. They found it impossible to rescue him from his watery grave, and he sank to rise no more. The only had not been recovered last night, and which all the water of the city is drawn the thought is not a pleasant one.

The deceased is said to have been an indusact which terminated his life is attributable Louchburg Virginian.

BURNING OF A TENEMENT-HOUSE-HORRI-BLE FATALITIES .- New York, January 19 .-At half-past 6 e'clock to-night a fire broke out in the grocery-store of F. J. Boldicker, corner of Hoyl and Pacific streets, Brookyn. The flames originated in the basement, ad soon enveloped the entire structure. There were five families in the house. Bollicker and his family, who occupied the second floor, escaped. Mrs. Blood and two as, who occupied the third floor, jumped om the window. Mrs. Blood was killed, and the two sons fatally injured.

The same floor was occupied by Timothy Cormick, his sons Patrick and John, and laughter Eller. John escaped, but his lather and brother were suffocated, while his ister was fatally injured by jumping from the window. A number of persons were seriously wounded and others slightly burned in endeavoring to escape. The building is a Brunt Kissam, who loses $12,000. Boldicker loses $3,500. McCormick's family lose $3,-500, while other tenants sustain losses of about $3,000.

REMOVAL OF THE CAPITAL OF WEST IRGINIA .- Charleston, January 18 .- The Hop. J. M. Bennett, of Lewis county, introduced a bill into the Senate tc-day providing for the removal of the capital from Charleston to Wheeling.. The excitement over the prospect of removal is at fever heat. The Charleston people are anxious and almost despondent. Indeed, I may say that Charleston is apparently conquered. There are known to be thirty-nine members in the House and fourteen in the Senate who favor removal to Wheeling as a temporary location. On this proposition the bill will be likely to asked to do. pass the Senate at an early day .- Telegram to Wheeting Intelligencer.

Louisiana Spoils It is understood that some additional derelopements will shortly be made-showing still further the rottenness of the carpet-bag rule in Louisiana. It is stated by several senators, who have been examining into the matter, that there is the best reason to believe that there has been an unlawful division of the funds appropriated for the improvement of the Mississippi river and the fortifications near its mouth. The fortification bill, which is now awaiting the action of the Senate, appropriates $25,000 each for Fort Jackson and Fort St. Phillip. Objections will be made to passing these appropriations until there is some assurance that the money will all go where Congress intends. A resolution will be introduced in the Senate either to-morrow or shortly calling for a detailed statement of the expenditures which have heretofore been made under these appropriations .- Washington telegram - Balti-

Changes in Circulation.

Since the passage of the act of January 14th the Controller of the Currency has received applications for the organization of new national banks as follows: One bank in New York, capital, $1,000,000; two banks in Connecticut, $200,000; two banks in Maine, $150,000; one bank in New Jersey, $100,000; one bank in Kentucky, $100,000; two banks in Massachusetts, $200,000; eight banks in Pennsylvania, $850,000; one bank in Illinois, $50,000. Applications have been received for an increase of capital from one bank in Kentucky, $200,000; one bank in Massachusetts, $200,000; three banks in Pennsylvania, $310,000. Total increase, $3,360,000. Since the date of the passage of the act above mentioned legal-tenders have been deposited for the purpose of reducing circulation by two banks in the State of New York, $173,000; one bank in Illinois, $59,000.

GOVERNOR BRAMLETTE-A SENSATIONAL INCIDENT OF THE FUNERAL OF THE LATE GOis it hes above the source of supply from versor. -[Special dispatch to the Chicago Tribune.]—Cincinnati, January 16.—Dispatches to the Cincinnati papers announce the appearance of the former mistress of the trions and orderly young man, and the rash late Governor Bramlette, of Kentucky, at the funeral of that gentleman yesterday. She solely to the crazing effect of strong drink.

Another warning to beware of the monster. evading the watch of the detectives, who had been warned against her, and who had the strictest orders not to allow her to enter the cemetery. There was great fear that she would create a scene at the grave. Her name is Laurel Bell, and she is now landlady of a bad house in this city. Governor Bramlette had supported her in Louisville a year or two, until brought up for it by the church of which he was a member. He then made an able defence of his course, and smoothed the matter over. When it came about that he desired to marry, he made an honorable settlement with her, paying her $10,000. With this money she came to Cincinnati nearly a year ago, bringing with her a colored female servant. She lived here in public houses in some style until arrested for an assault on a landlady. She then negotiated for the premises she now occupies, which she fitted up in elegant style. It was a telegram to her that first gave the news of Governor Bramlette's death in this city.

THE AIR-LINE RAILROAD, AGAIN.-There was a new move yesterday evening on the health-an originally tough constitution torn railroad chess-board in this city. ERETCHES OF LOUISIANA MEN-GENERAL FRE-DERICK N. OGDEN - GOVERNOR JOHN MC-ENERY-LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR. DAVID B. PENN-ATTORNEY-GENERAL H. N. OGDEN-BON, R. HI MARH-JAMES D. HILL, ESQ. 77 Special correspondence of the Mobile Register.

NEW ORLBANS, January 15, 1875. The great events that have transpired in ouisiana have rendered the men who took prominent part in them conspieuous, and ives to their personal characteristics a public interest. Louisiana holds the key to the great Mississippi Valley, and her great me tropolls—the commercial centre of the South vest-acts as a queen on the Father of Waters, and concentrates into her lap half the cotton and all the sugar of America, and much of the import trade in coffee, crockery, wine, etc., to the Northwest, and in turn noble citizens have taken, and the heroic and for home rule and American liberty, have made Louisiana the representative of the entire suffering South.

We are sure our readers would like to be made better acquainted, and, if possible through the means of writing, to know personally, as it were, the gentlemen who have taken the most prominent part in this great struggle, and for this purpose we will give a few sketches of those who stand out in boldest relief:

First on the list is General Frederick N. ogden. He is a native of Louisiana on the father's side, coming from North Carolina, of English descent, and his mother a Castilian. This gives him a very fortunate admixture of Spanish daring, pride, will, and Saxon strength, determination of purpose, and ca-NEW YORK, January 19 .- At a meeting of pacity for ruling. There is reported to cers of the Government to perform simply rior, if any equal. He is the very soul of true chivalric honor, fidelity to duty and to country. Modest and unassuming, yet fully competent to assert and exert authority when it belongs to him. Ever since 1865 he has been engaged in mercantile pursuits, and his time occupied by a strict attention to business. With untiring energy, skill, and determination, he organized the White League into an efficient and well-officered and well-disciplined body of soldiers in New Orleans.

In October last General Ogden was offered the nomination of the Conservatives for the office of sheriff of New Orleans, worth $120,000, which he declined, saying whatever he had done or was able to do for his suffering State he did freely and for love, and desired no reward but the esteem of his countrymen.

Governor John McEnery was born in Virinia, of Scotch-Irish descent, and has lived Louisiana since he was two years of age. Up to the time of his election as Governor he held a high position at the bar of North Louisiana; distinguished rather for his learning and sound judgment than for eloquence or genius. > David B. Penn, Lieutenant-Governor, native of Louisiana, is about forty years of age; straight, jet-black hair, moustache, and eyes; olive complexion; about five feet eleven inches in height; speaks slowly and with great deliberation. He is a man of few words, but of determined action. Calm and cool. apparently he is incapable of being excited on any subject, but full of brave determination in any course to which he has made up his mind. He has been a merchant and planter all his life, and was, like most of those who are now prominent in public affairs in Louisiana, forced to take action to save, or do something towards saving, his beloved State from absolute ruin. Lieutenant-Governor Penn is a model of calm, unruffled patriotism and cool courage, and temperance and moderation, and liberality.

Horatio N. Ogden, the elected Attorney-General, is a first cousin to General Fred. Ogden; is one of the most universally popular men in Louisiana. He is one of the very few men of decided talents and fixed principles who have no enemies. Unlike his cousin, except in his high and chivalric sense of honor and duty, he is more fitted to persuade than to command. With a melifluous and easy flow of good language, and a philosophical and speculative mind, thoroughly imbued with the principles of moral and religious philosophy, and with considerable literary culture, he would have shone with more brilliancy in the pulpit than he does at the bar, though he is a star of no small magnitude in his chosen profession. In person Mr. Ogden is about five feet ten inches in height, of medium build, round head and face, the rotundity of which is increased by baldness on the top of his head, brown locks hanging down on his neck; a thin red moustache; blue eyes; has the appearance of a man of forty-eight, while, in fact, he is only thirty-four. His high character, talents, fluency of utterance, and a certain magnetism and conciliatory demeanor, which is part of his persuasiveness, combined with caution and good judgment, have given him a deservedly high place among Louisiana's true and noble sons. None could better represent them in the Senate of the United States. Mr. Robert H. Marr is like Mr. Alexander Stephens, physically a very light weight, say seventy five pounds, light hair, thin small nose, small blue eyes, with a chronic tear in them, clean-shaven, thin, angular face and small head, about five feet seven inches tall, fifty-three years old, and a native of Kentucky. IMMIGRATION .- A writer in the Augusta Ga.) Chronicle advances some files upon the subject of "immigration," which have about them the flavor of saving common sense. He regards the expensive schemes for promoting immigration which have from time to time been organized in the southern States as of little practical use, and thinks that nothing can be done except to create and maintain the conditions which will induce the filling up of the country by natural processes without the aid of special agencies. The men who manage the immigration associations are always suspected of having some personal interest in the work over and above that which concerns them as good citizens engaged in promoting the common welfare. the agents who go abroad get large salaries, and sometimes are paid a per capita premium on the able-bodied men whom they induce to locate in a particular State or county. The recruits which they add to the laboring population are often selected with a view of getting the bounty offered by confiding agri cultural communities rather than a desire to ncrease the number of useful citizens.

This level-headed Georgian has but little faith in the home and foreign immigration bureaus which have undertaken to bring abor and capital to the South. He thinks that the reports of geological surveys and the hand-books setting forth the peculiar attractions of the region that wants immigrants that are scattered broadcast over Europe make but little impression on the peasantry of Germany, Sweden, England, Ire-iand, and Scotland, for whose benefit these advertisements have been gotten up without regard to expense. Neither does he look with favor upon the propositions which have often been made to the land-owners of the South to give away a portion of their estates to the end that the remainder may become more valuable. No private citizen will give away his lands to be worked by another, whether he be a negro, a Swede, or a German. The great mass of the immigrants who come to this country are not farmers. . If the majority of them were furnished with a hundred acres of land free of cost they could not make a living by tilling the soil. They nearly all remain in the cities and become tradesmen, laborers, coachmen, and waiters. Such of them as are skilled mechanics have but little difficulty in finding employment. To talk of bringing over a colony of immigrants and turning them into farmers by the simple pro-cess of giving them a piece of land and a few agricultural implements is absurd. The writer referred to submits the following as his recipe for making the South pros-"1. Let each farmer raise and educate his the State by fair treatment and a prompt and faithful fulfilment of contracts made with them.

"5. To that end the Legislature should provide some compulsory mode of arbitration in a summary way of all disputes about the division of the crops between the landlord and the tenant or laborer, so that both parties could obtain speedy justice."-Baltimore American.

A CENTENNIAL CAUTION .-- The Director-General of the United States centential commission publishes a card, in which he says: "Theattention of the Centenial Board of Finance has been called to certain advertisements published in newspapers in western and southern States, under the head of United States Centenial Exhibition of 1876, stating that local agents and subscription solicitors are wanted in every county and town for one year, at fifteen dollars a week and thirty per cent. commission, and requesting remittances of fifteen cents for a prospectus of a so-called centennial subscription bureau, 521 Chesnut street, Philadelphia. Bilis for the insertion of these advertisements having been forwarded to the board-of finance, it is deemed necessary for information and protection of newspaper publishers to advise them that the said so-called centennial subscription bureau is in no way connected with the United States Centennial Exhibition, and that neither the United States centennial commission nor the centennial board of finance is in any way responsible for bills or other obligations of the so-called centennial subscription bureau."
